FAQs About MassHealth CommonHealth

What is MassHealth CommonHealth

MassHealth CommonHealth is a program offered through MassHealth. It is a supplemental insurance policy for children with qualifying disabilities that covers copays, deductibles, and some health services not covered by your private insurance.

Who is eligible for MassHealth CommonHealth?

Children with qualifying disabilities are eligible. Children must also be covered by your family's private commercial insurance.

How does MassHealth determine if a child has a qualifying disability?

A qualifying disability is based on a child's functional status. A qualifying disability is determined by the Child Disability Supplement form, which is submitted as part of the MassHealth CommonHealth application process.

Is family income considered?

No, your family income is not considered for your child's eligibility. Eligibility is based on the determination of a qualifying disability.

Is MassHealth CommonHealth free?

No, MassHealth CommonHealth is not free care in Massachusetts. When a child is determined eligible for CommonHealth, a premium is calculated based on your family's income and size.

Which family members do I include in the MassHealth CommonHealth application?

The application requires that you enter information for everyone in your household. You must do this, even though your child with a disability is the only one eligible for MassHealth CommonHealth.

Can my child see any health care provider with MassHealth CommonHealth?

No, to use MassHealth CommonHealth, your provider must accept both your child's private insurance and MassHealth CommonHealth.

What is important for me to know when I am applying for MassHealth CommonHealth?

Person #1 in the application should be the adult
